Liberty Street Economics features insight and analysis from New York Fed economists working at the intersection of research and policy. Launched in 2011, the blog takes its name from the Bank's headquarters at 33 Liberty Street in Manhattan's Financial District. JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary sources. Articles in economics journals are usually classified according to the JEL classification codes, a system originated by the Journal of Economic Literature. The New York Fed's Liberty Street Economics blog provides commentary on current economic topics relating to monetary policy, macroeconomic developments, financial stability issues, and regional trends in the Second Federal Reserve District.
