Michael Curtiz (/ k ??r ? t i? z / kur-TEEZ; born Manó Kaminer; December 24, 1886 – April 11, 1962) was a Hungarian-born American film director, recognized as one of the most prolific directors in history. Michael Paul Smith—self portrait (Click on photo to view a larger image.) Introduction. Many people build models and take photos of them. Few put so much time, effort and craftsmanship into the project that the resulting photos are totally believable. "Michael, Row the Boat Ashore" (or "Michael Rowed the Boat Ashore", or "Michael, Row Your Boat Ashore", or "Michael Row That Gospel Boat") is an African-American spiritual. Michael's new theme also includes new audio elements that still feel very much grounded in the types of scores Carpenter composed in movies he released in the late-'70s and mid-'80s, including Assault on Precinct 13, The Fog, and Christine.
